

I am grateful to be considered as a candidate for one of the vacant positions of Director-at-Large. As a neuroanaesthesia trained neurointensivist, I am passionate about all aspects of neuroscience in anaesthesiology and critical care and committed to the only Society with international outreach in our subspecialty.

I am a longstanding member of SNACC, a regular attendee at the annual scientific meeting, and faculty at the 2018 meeting. I also represented the Society at the 2019 ISNACC meeting. I have benefited greatly from the opportunities that SNACC offers to interact with clinical and basic neuroscience colleagues from around the world, and from mentorship by senior colleagues in the Society.

The international membership of SNACC is integral to its continued success, and I would like to encourage a more international profile in the leadership of the Society. SNACC has previously had distinguished leaders from UK and Europe, and it would be a privilege to follow in their footsteps.

I am passionate about education and training in neuroanesthesia and neurocritical care and led a successful application for our department to be accepted as one of the pilot sites for ICPNT accreditation. This initiative is a great opportunity for SNACC to develop further its relationships with national Societies of neuroanaesthesia, and I would be well-positioned to facilitate this.

I am enthusiastic, hard-working and committed. If elected, I would act as an ambassador for SNACC in Europe and elsewhere, using my international contacts to promote the Society.

Thank you for your consideration.
